Murder We Wrote specialise in evenings of deliciously, deadly entertainment. Murder has never been so much fun!

How It Works....

Each guest is furnished with a synopsis of the plot and characters. Murder We Wrote also supplies the dinner tables with notepaper and pens.

The evening usually starts at 7.30pm in the bar (a good place to start!) where the first interactions take place. The whole evening is fully interactive with the actors mingling with the guests. The actors are not always obvious from the onset, but become very apparent during the performance. The guests are able to question the actors throughout the course of the evening.

Dinner is normally served at approximately 8.15pm where the actors dine with the other guests. The actors remain in character throughout the entire evening. Interactions continue throughout the meal, but not whilst the guests are eating.

During the course of the evening, a murder will be committed and it is then up to the guests to use their 'little grey cells' to work out whom has committed this dastardly crime! Clues are dropped throughout the performance and the guests will have to watch and listen very carefully. Red herrings are often thrown in, just to add to the confusion!

At the end of dinner, coffee is served and the guests are asked to present their reasoning by table/group. A spokesman is elected from each table to stand and give their verdict. The winning table/group of the evening will be those with the correct identity of the murderer and the closest reasons.

The winners are suitably rewarded for their detection work with a certificate and prize.

Murder We Wrote are very happy to travel to any location with travelling costs kept to a minimum.
